*As the impact of COVID-19 has been significant since February 2020, the change in fluctuation compared with 2019 is also stated.

<Special Items>

With regard to the hotels owned by JHR, RevPAR of the total of the 25 Hotels with Variable Rent, etc. for April 2022 decreased by 57.1% compared to the same month of 2019.

As for hotel accommodation demand, leisure demand has been recovering particularly on holidays and national holidays. For example, during long holidays started in late April (Golden Week), some hotels achieved high occupancy rate that were close to the numbers in 2019. In addition, group and school trips have been showing some recoveries. In May 2022, we had better calendar in comparison to other years since it included the majority of Golden Week and RevPAR is expected to decline by the latter half of 40% compared to the same month of 2019.

Under such circumstances, each hotel continues to strive giving consideration to health of guests and employees and working to manage hygiene environment and conducting operations while thoroughly implementing cost management. Moreover, each hotel is working to create and capture leisure demand by implementing measures ahead of the market with operators, such as highly competitive products and creation of original charm in anticipation of the recovery phase, in addition to developing value-added products and price-conscious products that meet the current market conditions.
